

Narrative, Expository, and Descriptive Essay

You may print this self-evaluation form.

CATEGORY	4	3	2	1
Introduction	The introduction has a thesis statement that clearly introduces the topic of the essay and catches the interest of the reader.	The introduction has a thesis statement that introduces the topic of the essay.	The introduction has a thesis statement.	There is no identifiable thesis statement in the introduction.
Supporting Paragraphs and Transitions	The three supporting paragraphs have topic sentences and effective transitions that illustrate the connection of ideas.	The three supporting paragraphs have some topic sentences and some transitions that illustrate the connection of ideas.	Only one or two supporting paragraphs have some topic sentences and some transitions that illustrate the connection of ideas.	The ideas in the three paragraphs are not related.
Concluding Paragraph	The concluding paragraph includes a restatement of the thesis and the information is related to the other elements of the essay.	The concluding paragraph refers to the thesis and most of the information is related to the other elements of the essay.	The concluding paragraph does not restate the thesis and the information is somewhat related to the other elements of the essay.	The concluding paragraph is unorganized and ineffective.
Student Product Assessment	All of the directions were followed, and the student completed all of the requirements of the assignment.	Most of the directions were followed, and the student completed most of the requirements of the assignment.	Some of the directions were followed, and the student completed some of the requirements of the assignment.	The assignment was completed without following any of the requirements of the assignment.
Note: A score of zero may be given if the student did not complete the assigned task.				